Preface

The Singapore Department of Statistics develops national statistical standards and promotes their adoption and use in Singapore. The adoption and use of these standards in the collection, analysis and dissemination of statistics ensure consistency and comparability of data, facilitating relevant and meaningful analysis as well as data sharing.

The Singapore Standard Industrial Classification (SSIC) is the national standard for classifying economic activities undertaken by economic units. The SSIC is used for censuses of population, business surveys and administrative databases. The SSIC 2025 adopts the basic framework of the latest International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities Revision 5 (ISIC Rev. 5) developed by the United Nations Statistics Division (UNSD). It is reviewed and updated periodically to reflect developments in the Singapore economy, particularly the emergence of new economic activities as well as to align with changes in the international standard.

The SSIC 2025 maintains the basic coding system of the classification while providing substantially more details than the previous editions. New sections have been created to align to the changes in ISIC Rev. 5. New codes have also been introduced in SSIC 2025 to capture different forms of production and newly emerging industries. Obsolete codes have been removed while detailed definitions and alphabetical index have been enhanced to provide clarity on the scope of various industrial codes to facilitate better understanding and appropriate use of the classification.

The review of the SSIC was undertaken by a working group comprising representatives from many agencies, namely the Singapore Department of Statistics, Accounting and Corporate Regulatory Authority, Building and Construction Authority, Central Provident Fund Board, Economic Development Board, Enterprise Singapore, Infocomm Media Development Authority, Inland Revenue Authority of Singapore, Ministry of Digital Development and Information, Ministry of Manpower and Monetary Authority of Singapore. Inputs from other ministries and statutory boards have also been incorporated, where appropriate. I would like to thank all who have contributed to the review of the classification.

Our Vision

National Statistical Service of Quality, Integrity and Expertise

Our Mission

We Deliver Insightful Statistics and Trusted Statistical Services that Empower Decision Making

Our Guiding Principles

Professionalism &amp; Expertise	We adhere to professional ethics and develop statistical competency to produce quality statistics that comply with international concepts and best practices.
Relevance &amp; Reliability	We produce statistics that users need and trust.
Accessibility	We facilitate ease of access to our statistics through user-friendly platforms.
Confidentiality	We protect the confidentiality of individual information collected by us.
Timeliness	We disseminate statistics at the earliest possible date while maintaining data quality.
Innovation	We constantly seek ways to improve our processes, leveraging new technology, to deliver better products and services to users.
Collaboration	We engage users on data needs, data providers and respondents on supply of data, and undertake the role of national statistical coordination.
Effectiveness	We optimise resource utilisation, leveraging administrative and alternative data sources to ease respondent burden.

Part I: Introduction and Methodological Notes

1 Introduction

1.1 The Singapore Standard Industrial Classification (SSIC) is designed for use in the collection of data (e.g., censuses, surveys, administrative records) that requires the classification of economic activities undertaken by economic units. It is also used in the compilation, presentation and analysis of a wide range of economic statistics. To ensure the continuing relevance of the SSIC, the classification is usually reviewed and updated every five years, taking into account recent developments in the economy.

1.2 The Singapore Department of Statistics (DOS) led a multi-agency working group in the revision of the SSIC and consulted public agencies for their views on the classification. The deliberations and consultations ensure the SSIC would continue to meet the classification needs of users and producers of economic data.

1.3 The SSIC 2025 adopts the basic framework of the International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities Revision 5 (ISIC Rev. 5) for international comparability, with appropriate modifications and updates to reflect changes in Singapore's economy and users' requirements.

1.4 There are significant updates to the SSIC 2025 compared to the SSIC 2020 given the recent updates in the latest ISIC. Further, new five-digit codes have been added to track emerging economic activities like carbon capture activities, manufacture of alternate proteins and concert organisers.

2 Structure of the SSIC

2.1 The framework used for the design and construction of SSIC is adapted from ISIC Rev. 5. Its scope is the production boundary as defined by the United Nations' System of National Accounts 2008 (2008 SNA). The SSIC is based on the economic activity undertaken by an economic unit in the economy.

Economic Activity

2.2 An economic activity takes place when resources such as labour, capital, goods and services are used in a production process to produce goods and services.

2.3 An economic activity can be distinguished into three types:

Principal activity refers to the activity that contributes the most to the value added (VA)<sup>1</sup> of the goods and services produced by the economic unit, or the activity with the highest VA among the activities of the unit.

<sup>1</sup> Value added (VA) is a measure of an economic activity's contribution to Gross Domestic Product (GDP), which is an aggregated measure of a country's production. Gross VA is obtained by subtracting the value of a unit's inputs for production from the value of the unit's output from production.

Secondary activity refers to each separate activity undertaken by the economic unit that produces products or services for third parties which is not the unit's principal activity.

Ancillary activity refers to activity undertaken to support the main productive activities of an economic unit by providing goods or services entirely for the use of that unit. Examples of such activities are human resource functions, bookkeeping, transportation, storage, purchasing, sales promotion, cleaning, repair and maintenance, security, etc.

2.4 Figure 2-1 illustrates the concept of principal, secondary and ancillary activities. The economic unit's principal activity is 'Retail sale of handphoned and related telecommunications and peripheral equipment' as it is the activity with the highest VA. 'Repair of communications equipment' is considered a secondary activity as the repair services are provided to third parties but does not generate the highest VA. Ancillary activities are not considered when determining the economic unit's principal activity as they support the principal and secondary activities of the unit and do not contribute directly to its VA.

Economic Unit

2.5 Economic unit refers to the unit that is engaged in an economic activity. In Singapore, the two common types of economic unit are the 'Enterprise' and 'Establishment'.

Enterprise is an institutional unit in its capacity as a producer of goods and services and is usually a legal unit at which financial and balance sheet accounts are maintained. It can be engaged in one or more productive activities.

Establishment is an economic unit which has been defined for statistical production. It predominantly engages in one kind of economic activity at a single location.

2.6 For most firms, the enterprise is the equivalent of the establishment. Large and complex enterprises that engage in multiple economic activities belonging to different SSIC industries can be broken down into establishments if the separate economic activities are identifiable. Figure 2-2 illustrates the enterprise and establishment relationship.

Structure of the Classification

2.7 The SSIC is a classification with a hierarchical structure. At the highest level of aggregation, there are 22 broad categories known as 'Sections', each denoted by a single alphabetical letter. Each 'Section' comprises one or more 'Divisions' as shown below:

Section	Division
A Agriculture and Fishing	01-03
B Mining and Quarrying	08-09
C Manufacturing	10-32
D Electricity, Gas, Steam and Air-Conditioning Supply	35
E Water Supply; Sewerage, Waste Management and Remediation Activities	36-38

Section	Division
F Construction	41-43
G Wholesale and Retail Trade	46-47
H Transportation and Storage	49-53
I Accommodation and Food Service Activities	55-56
J Publishing, Broadcasting, and Content Production and Distribution Activities <sup>2</sup>	58-60
K Telecommunications, Computer Programming, Consultancy, Computing Infrastructure, and Other Information Service Activities <sup>3</sup>	61-63
L Financial and Insurance Activities	64-66
M Real Estate Activities	68
N Professional, Scientific and Technical Activities	69-75
O Administrative and Support Service Activities	77-82
P Public Administration and Defence	84
Q Education	85
R Health and Social Services	86-88
S Arts, Sports and Recreation	90-93
T Other Service Activities	94-96
U Activities of Households as Employers of Domestic Personnel	97
V Activities of Extra-Territorial Organisations and Bodies	99

2.8 A numerical five-digit coding system is used to distinguish the different levels of classification. The system is hierarchical in nature, showing progressively finer detail from the highest level of aggregation (Division) to the lowest level (Sub-class). This allows users the flexibility to tabulate, analyse and publish data according to the level of detail required. An example of the hierarchical nature of the SSIC is shown below:

<sup>2</sup> The standardised shortened reference that may be used for Section J in statistical presentations is 'Publishing, Broadcasting and Content Production'.

<sup>3</sup> The standardised shortened reference that may be used for Section K in statistical presentations is 'Telecommunications and Information Technology Services'.

Classification Level	Classification Title	Classification Code
Section	Manufacturing	C
Division	Manufacture of Computer, Electronic and Optical Products	26
Group	Manufacture of Electronic Components and Boards	261
Class	Manufacture of Semiconductor Devices	2611
Sub-class	Semiconductor Wafer Fabrication	26112

2.9 In cases at the three- and four-digit levels where a given level of classification is not divided into categories at the next more detailed level of classification, the last digit of the code for the only category at the next more detailed level would be '0'. For instance, the Group 'Construction of Buildings' is coded as SSIC 410 as the Division 'Construction of Buildings' (code 41) contains only one group. Similarly, the code for the Class 'Passenger and Freight Rail Transport' is SSIC 4910 as it is the only class within the Group 'Transport via Railways' (code 491).

2.10 At the three-, four- and five-digit levels, the digit '9' that appears in the last digit position usually denotes residual activities grouped at the respective level of detail. These residual activities usually comprise a range of the less common types of economic activities which are not significant enough to justify a separate code. They are grouped together as a separate category so that no activities, however small or insignificant, are left out of the classification structure. The description of such codes usually ends with the term 'n.e.c.', which stands for 'not elsewhere classified'.

2.11 The numerical codes of the SSIC 2025 are closely aligned with the ISIC Rev. 5 to facilitate easy comparison between the two classifications. As such, the codes at the two-, three- and four-digit levels may not run consecutively if an ISIC code is not used in SSIC. For instance, the SSIC does not contain the ISIC codes 05 'Mining of Coal and Lignite', 06 'Extraction of Crude Petroleum and Natural Gas' and 07 'Mining of Metal Ores'.

Detailed Definitions, Alphabetical Index and Correspondence Tables

2.12 Detailed definitions are available for each five-digit SSIC code. Each detailed definition includes a brief lead statement describing the scope of the economic activity, accompanied with some examples. Also at the end of each definition is a list of economic activities that are excluded to provide clarity on the scope of the five-digit SSIC code.

For example, the five-digit definition for growing of fruits is:

Sub-class 01130 ‘Growing of fruits and nuts (except legumes)’

Lead statement describing scope of economic activity	 This Sub-class includes growing of fruits such as banana, papaya, mangoes, dates and/or pineapples.
Economic activities that should be classified elsewhere	 This Sub-class excludes: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• growing of leafy and fruit vegetables (non-hydroponics), see 01111</li> <li>• growing of leafy and fruit vegetables (hydroponics), see 01120</li> <li>• growing of nursery products, see 0114</li> </ul>

2.13 Two-way correspondence tables between SSIC 2025 and SSIC 2020, and between SSIC 2025 and ISIC Rev. 5 are available at the most detailed level. Correspondence tables between SSIC 2025 and SSIC 2020 help users to link data that are coded in different versions of the SSIC. Correspondence tables between SSIC 2025 and ISIC Rev. 5 are useful to convert SSIC-based data into ISIC-based data and vice-versa for international comparability.

2.14 The SSIC’s alphabetical index contains alternative titles that are used to describe an economic activity. It is useful in determining the appropriate classification codes when different terms are provided in statistical and administrative data collections.

2.15 The detailed definitions, alphabetical index and correspondence tables are available on the SingStat Website and may be updated periodically to facilitate users’ coding.

3 Application of the Classification

3.1 The classification principles form the basis on which the SSIC 2025 is structured and applied.

Basic Principles

3.2 An economic unit is assigned an SSIC code based on its principal activity, which is the activity that contributes the most to the VA of the goods and services produced by the unit.

3.3 It should be emphasised that an economic unit's SSIC code does not depend on the following characteristics:

Characteristics that are not relevant when determining SSIC code	Examples
Type of ownership	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Foreign, local, private or government owned</li> </ul>
Type of legal organisation	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Sole proprietorship, partnership, company</li> </ul>
Type of production	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Formal or informal production</li> <li>Market or non-market production</li> <li>Production by factories or households</li> </ul>
Mode of delivery	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Internet or traditional brick-and-mortar</li> </ul>

For instance:

- Firms that retail clothes solely through the Internet are classified with firms that retail clothes through brick-and-mortar stores
- Firms that provide virtual banking services are classified with brick-and-mortar banks
- Self-employed private academic tutors are classified with firms that operate tuition centres

Principal Activity and the Top-Down Method

3.4 The principal activity of an economic unit is determined by the activity that contributes the most VA using the top-down method.

3.5 The top-down approach follows a hierarchical principle to ensure that the classification at the lowest level is consistent with the classification at the highest level. It starts by identifying the SSIC Section that contributes the highest VA, followed by the Division and then the Group and so on until the highest VA item within the Class is obtained. Based on the top-down method, the SSIC code of the economic unit in the example given in Figure 3-1 is SSIC 27201 'Manufacture of primary batteries' as the VA of SSIC 27 'Manufacture of electrical equipment' is the highest.

Section	C 'Manufacturing' (VA = 10)			M 'Real Estate Activities' (VA = 5)
Division	24 'Manufacture of basic metals' (VA = 4)	27 'Manufacture of electrical equipment' (VA = 6)		68 'Real estate activities' (VA = 5)
Group	241 'Manufacture of basic iron and steel' (VA = 4)	272 'Manufacture of batteries and accumulators' (VA = 4)	275 'Manufacture of domestic appliances' (VA = 2)	681 'Real estate activities with own or leased property' (VA = 5)
Class	2410 'Manufacture of basic iron and steel' (VA = 4)	2720 'Manufacture of batteries and accumulators' (VA = 4)	2750 'Manufacture of domestic appliances' (VA = 2)	6810 'Real estate activities with own or leased property' (VA = 5)
Sub-class	24101 'Iron and steel rolling mills' (VA = 4)	27201 'Manufacture of primary batteries' (VA = 4)	27509 'Manufacture of domestic appliances n.e.c.' (VA = 2)	68101 'Real estate developers' (VA = 5)

Note:

VA refers to value added

3.6 For wholesale and retail trade, there is an additional consideration based on the number of classes that the firm's products cover. The type of wholesale/retail trade would be considered as non-specialised trade if the firm's sales cover at least five SSIC classes and no single product contributes more than 50% of the firm's VA. Otherwise, the type of wholesale/retail trade would be considered as specialised trade in the product which contributes the highest VA based on the usual top-down approach.

Value Added Substitutes

3.7 Where it is not possible to obtain information on VA of the goods sold or services rendered, the principal activity could be determined by other alternatives such as:

- Gross output that is attributable to the goods or services
- Value of sales or shipments of those groups of products falling into each category of activity
- Proportion of employment or wages in the various activities
- Hours worked attributable to the various activities
- Employment accordingly to the proportion of people engaged in the different activities of the unit
- Capital intensity attributable to the different activities

Treatment of Vertical Integration

3.8 In some economic units, the activities undertaken are vertically integrated, i.e., the activities extend over a number of stages in the production of a product and the output of one process serves as the input for the next (e.g., semiconductor wafer fabrication combined with packaging in the production of integrated circuits). The unit is to be classified based on the principal activity among the different stages.

3.9 In instances where the value added cannot be estimated for each of the vertically integrated activities, the principal activity could be determined by comparison with units that engage in similar activities. If this cannot be done, the unit should then be classified based on its final activity.

Economic Units Not Yet in Operation

3.10 In some cases, economic units may need to carry out preparatory activities before they can commence operations. Shops or restaurants, for example, might need to renovate their premises. If they undertake these activities themselves, they are to be classified based on their intended activity and not their preparatory activity such as interior decoration or construction.

3.11 Large enterprises or establishments (e.g., hotels, factories, theme parks) are more likely to either outsource the preparatory activities or to establish separate establishments to undertake them. In this case, the large enterprises or establishments are to be classified according to their intended activity while the establishments they set up to undertake the preparatory activity are to be classified under the appropriate preparatory activity.

Outsourcing

3.12 Outsourcing is an arrangement whereby a unit (Principal) engages the service of another unit (Contractor) to carry out specific tasks in the production process on a fee or contract basis. Both units should still be classified according to the principles described in paragraph 3.2. Paragraphs 3.13 to 3.20 and Figure 3-2 illustrate how the outsourcing principle is applied.

Classification of the Principal

3.13 In general, the principal is considered as though it undertakes the production process of a good or service itself regardless of whether part of or the entire production process is outsourced. There are a few exceptions as illustrated in paragraphs 3.18 and 3.19, and Figure 3-2.

3.14 For instance, a principal outsourcing a part of the goods production process in Section A 'Agriculture and Fishing', Section B 'Mining and Quarrying', Section D 'Electricity, Gas, Steam and Air Conditioning Supply' and Section E 'Water Supply; Sewerage, Waste Management and Remediation Activities' is classified as if it is covering the whole production process. Similarly for a principal which sub-contracts part of or the entire construction work to other units, but remains overall responsible for the construction process, the principal is classified in Section F 'Construction' under the sub-class that corresponds to the construction activities carried out.

3.15 For Section C 'Manufacturing', special considerations apply. A principal in Section C 'Manufacturing' should not only own the final output, but also satisfy one of the following conditions:

- (a) it owns the input materials to the production process, or
- (b) it owns the intellectual property products (IPP)<sup>4</sup>.

3.16 A factoryless goods producer (FGP) is a principal that controls the production of a good by undertaking the entrepreneurial steps and providing the technical specifications required to produce the good, but outsources most or all of the material transformation process required to produce the output. The FGP supplies intellectual property inputs such as product design, without charging for the right to use the intellectual property, but outsources the acquisition of most or all of the material inputs and the manufacturing process to a usually non-resident contractor.

3.17 Activities that constitute control or oversight of the manufacturing production process by a FGP include providing technical specifications, conducting regular audits and inspections to ensure that the manufacturers adhere to the agreed upon standards and practices, implementing stringent quality control systems such as regular inspections, testing, and monitoring at various stages of the production process, and placing their own employees or third-party inspectors at the manufacturing sites to oversee the production process and provide real-time feedback.

3.18 However, a principal that completely outsources most or all of the transformation process in manufacturing but does not own the input materials or supply intellectual property inputs should be classified in Section G 'Wholesale and Retail Trade' instead of Section C 'Manufacturing'. The principal in such an arrangement is considered as buying the completed goods from the contractor for subsequent resale.

3.19 Similarly, a principal outsourcing the whole goods production process of Sections A 'Agriculture and Fishing', B 'Mining and Quarrying' and E 'Water Supply; Sewerage, Waste Management and Remediation Activities' but does not own the input materials, is considered as purchasing the completed goods from the contractor for re-selling purposes. The principal involving in such an activity should be classified in Section G 'Wholesale and Retail Trade'.

<sup>4</sup> It is not necessary for the principal to be the economic owner of the IPP (deriving the benefits and accepting associated risks when exercising control over the IPP) as long as the principal supplies the IPP to the contractor without charging for right to use (e.g., principal could be paying royalties to obtain the IPP to be provided to the contractor).

Classification of Contractor

3.20 The unit which is engaged by the principal as a contractor is to be classified under the activity code related to the specific outsourced tasks, regardless of whether part of or the entire production process is subsequently further outsourced. For the production of goods, the activity of the contractor is classified with units producing the same goods for their own account. For services, the contractor is classified according to the portion of the services provision it is undertaking.

Intermediation Activities

3.21 Online marketplaces are intermediary platforms that facilitate orders for goods or non-financial services between buyers and sellers usually on a fee or commission basis, without taking ownership of the goods sold or providing/rendering the services that are being sold by third parties through their online platforms (e.g., website, mobile application). Such economic units are to be classified in SSIC 632. Revenue for these units can include other sources of income, such as revenue from sale of advertising space. The title of Group 632 has been refined to 'Online marketplaces operating on a fee or commission basis for goods/services sold by third-party' for clarity.

3.22 It should be noted that online intermediation activities are distinct from e-commerce activities (i.e., business transactions that transfer the ownership of the goods or services through the Internet or by other electronic means). If the unit has ownership of the goods sold/provides the services sold online, the unit should be classified based on its principal activity. For example, the operation of online wholesale/retail sales should be classified in Section G 'Wholesale and Retail Trade'.

3.23 Intermediaries that do not facilitate orders for goods and services mainly through online platforms are excluded from SSIC 632 'Online marketplaces operating on a fee or commission basis for goods/services sold by third-party'. For instance, contractors that carry out wholesale trade on a fee or commission basis not through online platforms are to be classified in SSIC 46100 'Wholesale on a fee or commission basis'.

Retail of Self-Produced Goods

3.24 In some cases, an economic unit may sell the goods it produces directly to the consumer. As retail trade involves the sale of goods by the retailers, the sale of goods produced by manufacturers themselves should not be viewed as a separate activity. A manufacturing establishment which sells its own products is to be classified under manufacturing and not retail trade.

3.25 For example, a tailor is classified under SSIC 14103 'Tailoring and dressmaking for individual order' in manufacturing and not as a retailer even though he makes and sells clothes to his customers. However, if the manufacturing establishment sells other goods (in addition to self-produced goods), the selling of the other goods is a retail activity. If the VA from the sale of other goods (i.e., the trade margin) is more than the VA from the manufacture (and sale) of its own produced good, then its principal activity is retail trade and it should be classified in Section G 'Wholesale and Retail Trade'.

Government Activities

3.26 Government units are to be classified based on their principal activities and not necessarily under Section P 'Public Administration and Defence'. For instance, government schools are classified in Section Q 'Education' while the monetary authority is classified in Section L 'Financial and Insurance Activities'.

3.27 Government units may engage in a wide range of productive activities covering not only public administration and defence activities but also individual goods and services similar to those produced by private sector units. Government units engaged in the production of individual goods and services should be classified in the same industry as private sector units which are engaged in similar activities. For government units which are engaged in both types of activities and records for separate establishments are available, the activities of a governmental nature should be classified under Section P 'Public Administration and Defence', while the provision of individual goods and services should be classified based on the relevant activities performed (e.g., hospital activities are in Section R). When separate records for multi-establishments are not available to distinguish between the type of activities, the unit should be classified based on its principal activity (based on VA or on a substitute of VA).

Repair, Maintenance and Installation Activities

3.28 Depending on the nature of the goods, economic units carrying out repair, maintenance and installation activities are classified under Section C 'Manufacturing', Section F 'Construction' or Section T 'Other Service Activities'. Units that repair, overhaul or perform installation of capital goods are classified in the same code as the units that produce the goods in Section C 'Manufacturing', since units manufacturing such goods often also provide these services for the same goods. Activities pertaining to the repair of buildings and civil engineering structures as well as installation or assembly of items or equipment in buildings for their functioning are classified under Section F 'Construction'. Activities pertaining to the repair of consumer goods (e.g., cars, computers, handphones, household and personal goods) are classified in Division 95 'Repair of Computers, Personal and Household Goods and Vehicles' in Section T 'Other Service Activities'.

Self-Employed Persons

3.29 Self-employed persons refer to persons who operate their own business or trade. The industry of self-employed persons (particularly own-account workers) is classified based on the main type of economic activity performed, rather than that of their main clients or intermediaries which match them with clients. For example, own-account delivery workers performing food delivery services are classified in the industry under SSIC 53200 'Courier activities (except national post activities)', and not the industry of the clients they service (e.g., restaurants) or intermediaries that match them to or assign them the delivery jobs (e.g., online marketplaces for food sold by third-party). The industry of a self-employed graphic designer should be classified as SSIC 74192 'Art and graphic design services', rather than based on the principal activity of the clients.

4 Comparison with SSIC 2020

Overview

4.1 The more significant changes in the SSIC 2025 compared to the SSIC 2020 are summarised below:

- The scope of a principal classified under Section C 'Manufacturing' has been expanded from ownership of material inputs to include intellectual property products.
- SSIC 2020 Section J 'Information and Communications' has been split to Section J 'Publishing, Broadcasting, and Content Production and Distribution

Activities’ and Section K ‘Telecommunications, Computer Programming, Consultancy, Computing Infrastructure and Other Information Service Activities’ in SSIC 2025. A new group has also been created to cover activities of acquiring the right to distribute content.

- New groups within Divisions 90 and 91 have been created to better capture cultural activities, conservation, restoration and other support activities for cultural heritage.
- A new sub-class for carbon capture activities has been created and the scope of existing sub-classes has been expanded to better identify environmental and conservation activities.
- New sub-classes have been created and the scope of existing sub-classes have been expanded to encompass emerging activities such as those related to crypto-assets and manufacture of alternative proteins.
- Changes have been made to align with ISIC Rev. 5, such as the restructuring of Section Q ‘Education’.
- Around 50 SSIC codes that are obsolete or have few establishment units have been removed or merged.
- Improvements to alphabetical index, detailed definitions and sub-class titles in classification structure have been incorporated.

4.2 A comparison of the number of codes at various levels between SSIC 2025 and SSIC 2020 is shown in the following table:

Removal of Obsolete Codes

4.3 Around 50 SSIC codes that are obsolete or have a few establishment units have been removed or merged. This is to ensure that the SSIC remains relevant and leave room for new codes to be created to meet users' needs.

Treatment of Factoryless Goods Producers (FGPs)

4.4 Aligning with the changes from ISIC Rev. 4 to Rev. 5, the scope of a principal has been expanded from ownership of input materials in SSIC 2020 to include intellectual property products in SSIC 2025. A FGP controls the production of a good by undertaking the entrepreneurial steps and providing the technical specifications without charging for the right to use the intellectual property but outsources most or all of the material transformation process required to produce the output. In SSIC 2020, such firms were classified under Section G 'Wholesale and Retail Trade' as FGPs typically do not provide or own material inputs.

Changes to SSIC 2020 Section J 'Information and Communications'

4.5 Following the changes from ISIC Rev. 4 to Rev. 5, SSIC 2020 Section J 'Information and Communications' has been split to Section J 'Publishing, Broadcasting, and Content Production and Distribution Activities' and Section K 'Telecommunications, Computer Programming, Consultancy, Computing Infrastructure and Other Information Service Activities' in SSIC 2025. SSIC 2025 Section J includes mainly the existing Divisions 58, 59 and 60, as well as news agencies and post-production recording conversion services to streaming formats, formerly a part of Division 63; and SSIC 2025 section K includes mainly existing Divisions 61, 62 and part of 63. The split is to better reflect that the activities of publishing, broadcasting, and content production and distribution overlap and are often carried out together. The split also means these activities are distinct from those of telecommunications, computer programming, consultancy and infrastructure.

4.6 Under SSIC 2025 Section J, a new SSIC Group 603 'News agency and other content distribution activities' has been created to align with ISIC Rev. 5, to cover activities of acquiring the right to distribute content. A new code has also been created for 'Social network sites and other content distribution activities' to better capture alternative modes of content distribution. Division 61 'Telecommunications' has also been restructured to remove the distinction between wired, wireless, and satellite telecommunications activities, as the transmission of telecommunications and related service activities are now typically carried out over a mix of channels. Examples of new activities have also been added to existing codes in the detailed definitions and alphabetical index to guide users on the classification of new activities such as streaming activities and development of immersive media.

Restructuring of Division/Group Structure for Arts Related Activities

4.7 Aligning with the changes from ISIC Rev. 4 to Rev. 5, new groups and classes have been created within Divisions 90 and 91 to better capture cultural activities, conservation, restoration and other support activities for cultural heritage. With the creation of these new groups and classes, there are now more breakdowns for the different activities related to each group, facilitating the collection and dissemination of statistics on cultural activities. Cultural conservation/restoration activities are also captured with the creation of new Group 913 'Conservation, restoration and other support activities for cultural heritage'.

Review of Activities Related to the Environment

4.8 With the 'Green Economy' being part of the Singapore Green Plan 2030, there is an expected increase in economic activities related to sustainability and the environment. To facilitate identification and reporting of such activities, the scope of existing codes has been refined and/or expanded to capture emerging environmental activities. For instance, SSIC 74904 'Carbon consultancy services' has been renamed to 'Sustainability consultancy services' and its scope expanded to include environmental, social and governance advisory services, carbon emission as well as other sustainability related consultancy. For electricity power generation activities, the delineation in SSIC 2025 has been refined to distinguish between renewable and non-renewable sources, instead of fossil fuel and non-fossil fuel sources in SSIC 2020. As Singapore is developing the Carbon Capture, Utilisation and Storage (CCUS) industry, a new sub-class has been created to include carbon capture activities. The detailed definitions of related codes have been updated with examples of activities in the CCUS value chain.

Other Changes for Alignment with ISIC Rev. 5 and to Account for Emerging Activities and Changing Operating Contexts

4.9 The structure for Section Q 'Education' has been updated to align with ISIC, with the split of former Group 851 'Pre-primary and primary education' into two Groups 851 and 852 for Pre-primary and Primary education respectively. Childcare centres which provide pre-primary education are also re-classified from social services to education. The operation of crocodile and frog farms have also been re-classified from animal production to aquaculture, aligning with ISIC Rev. 5.

4.10 A new Group 421 has been created for civil engineering general contractors, which were previously classified under Class 4210 'Construction of Roads and Railways' to reflect the local operating context, where such firms could undertake all types of civil engineering projects. New sub-classes have also been created for emerging economic activities such as manufacture of alternative proteins and concert organisers. The detailed definitions for existing codes have also been expanded to incorporate emerging activities such as manufacture of plant bio-stimulants, activities related to crypto-assets and alternative financing activities such as crowdfunding.

Stylistic Amendments to Classification Structure and Classification Documents

4.11 To improve coherence across the titles in classification structure and classification documents, stylistic amendments have been implemented. Instances of 'including' and 'e.g.' in the main sub-class titles have been removed where feasible, with the additional information/examples shifted to the detailed definitions for the sub-class and/or added to the alphabetical index. The use of 'excluding' has been replaced with 'except' to align with ISIC Rev. 5. Examples found in the detailed definitions have also been added to the alphabetical index for better consistency and discoverability across documents.

Improvements to Detailed Definitions

4.12 Detailed definitions for some 370 codes have been enhanced to provide more examples of activities covered in each sub-class, ensuring greater clarity in the classification of emerging economic activities and to align with ISIC Rev. 5. This will help users to distinguish between the different codes and reduce errors in assigning the appropriate SSIC codes at the five-digit level.

4.13 Detailed definitions have been added for each section of the SSIC, helping users to get a broad overview of the activities in each SSIC section according to the top-down classification principle.

Improvements to Alphabetical Index

4.14 More than 1,900 new and unique economic activity titles have been added to facilitate the use of the alphabetical index for coding purpose. Some 570 entries that are repetitions, with words arranged in different order, have been removed. For example, 'Research and development service, humanities' has been removed as it is a repetition of 'Humanities research and development service'.

4.15 For completeness and ease of identifying sub-class titles without the need to cross check between multiple documents, SSIC sub-class titles have been added to the alphabetical index. They are labelled 'Principal Title' to distinguish them from the alternative titles in the alphabetical index. Some 600 new activity titles have been added in the alphabetical index by including constituent activities from main sub-class titles. For example, for SSIC 20241 'Manufacture of food chemicals and additives', 'Manufacture of food chemicals' and 'Manufacture of food additives' have been included in the alphabetical index as shown in the table below:

SSIC 2025	Alphabetical Index Description	Category
20241	Manufacture of food chemicals and additives	Principal Title
20241	Manufacture of food chemicals	Alternative Title
20241	Manufacture of food additives	Alternative Title

5 How to Determine the Appropriate Industry Code for an Economic Unit

5.1 There are two ways to find an appropriate SSIC code in SSIC 2025:

- (a) Refer to the alphabetical index to look for the type of economic activity performed (including possible synonyms and abbreviations), and select the most appropriate SSIC code by referring to the detailed definition; or
- (b) Refer to the classification structure to classify the industry broadly, either at the Section, Group or Class level before narrowing down to the most appropriate five-digit code at the Sub-class level. The choice of SSIC code should be confirmed by referring to the detailed definition.
